

Dalton Highway Services

The Dalton Highway stretches 414 miles from Livengood (84 miles north of Fairbanks) to Deadhorse and the oilfields of Prudhoe Bay. Built to allow for construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline in the 1970s, this mostly gravel road travels through rolling, forested hills, across the Yukon River and Arctic Circle, through the rugged Brooks Range, and over the North Slope to the Arctic Ocean. This is no ordinary road -- it pays to be prepared. Carry extra motor oil and a spare tire(s). Check travel conditions and alerts at 511.alaska.gov.

South Dalton Highway - Fairbanks to MP 210

North Dalton Highway - MP 210 to Deadhorse

LEGEND

- Restrooms
- Gas
- Mechanic
- Food
- Lodging
- Boat Launch
- Camping
- No Camping
- Picnic Area
- Drinking Water
- Scenic Viewpoint
- Information
- Telephone
- Interpretive Trail
- RV Dump Station
- Post Office
- Airport
- Trash Can
- Highway
- MP Milepost #
- Administered Lands
- BLM lands
- NPS lands
- USFWS lands

 For graphic display only - not official land status map.*